Purchase the empty cask as a trophy for $125

Can I keep my cask at home?

Sadly, no. Liquor regulations prohibit the sale and delivery of bulk spirits to individuals so we will hold your spirits while they age and then bottle them on site for you.

What about bottles, labels, corks?

All are included in the bottling price of $250

Can I get my own personalized labels?

Yes! Personalized labels are possible, but at the expense of the purchaser. All labels must meet the labelling regulations set out by the Canadian Food and Inspection Agency and be ready and approved prior to bottling.

How many bottles will I get?

We can't predict exactly how many bottles your cask will yield due to evaporation rates and differences in each unique barrel. However, one 30 litre cask bottled after three years at 40% should yield approximately 45-750 ml bottles.

Evaporation?

As your spirit matures, the cask contents decrease due to evaporation, which is completely normal. In Scotland, it's called the "Angel's Share". Losses per year are expected to be approximately 3%-4% per year in a small barrel

What percentage will it be?

We recommend a filling strength of 40% ABV. However, you can choose to bottle at cask strength but the number of bottles will be proportionally fewer.

Is this Whisky?

Not yet, but it will be! Canadian liquor regulations forbid us from calling anything that hasn't been aged for three years a whisky. So while it ages in the cask, we'll call it a Single Malt spirit, but when it's done aging we can officially call it a Single Malt Whisky.
